

I'm generally not especially active when it comes to the issue of regulating the airwaves, but I believe that the latest actions of Sinclair Media cross the line on the public dime. If their actions are allowed, a serious argument against consolidation rules will be made.

We own the public airwaves, and we lease them to companies like Sinclair because they agree to serve the public interest. But it seems like they're just serving their OWN political interests, not even the economic interests of the company or the communities they serve.

We need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. Sinclair's actions are a perfect example of this. It's important to note that no channels on the liberal side have aired anti-Bush material in this way. Why do you think we're so skeptical of these companies acting in the public interest? Please act on our behalf. Thank you.
